Step out for liver health! Fundraising Tips

General Tips For Success...

Be enthusiastic about your participation: Whether asking for a donation or for someone to join your team, your enthusiasm will be contagious and others will want to support you.

Be prepared to say something about why you are participating in the event and supporting the cause: Why did you join a team? You or someone you know (a co-worker, a friend or family member) may have liver disease, is waiting for a liver transplant or has been touched by this devastating disease. Share their story – how has liver disease changed their lives or your life? Talking about personal experiences helps donors realize the impact of liver disease and that by making donation they will be supporting important liver health research and education programs to support Canadians, just like the person living with liver disease you described.

Ask, ask, ask & aim high: If you know your supporters are capable of making a larger donation, don't be afraid to ask for a specific amount. What's the worst that can happen? They can say "no" and then you ask for a lesser amount, or ask them to join your team. Another way to double donations is to ask if them if their employer has a matching gift program and if so, encourage them to make their donations through work (usually set up through Human Resource Departments).

Thank your donors/sponsors: As soon as they make a donation is best, but it's never too late to say thank you to someone. 1 in 4 Canadians may be affected by liver disease and can strike anyone at any age. With their help and yours, we can make a difference for the millions of Canadians living with liver disease. Refer people to the Canadian Liver Foundation website www.liver.ca so they can learn more about liver health.
